In previous Work2Suit® forums, we have looked at making the transition from full time work to flexible work and making the business case for this.

In our October forum, we will discuss the options for those who want to work flexibly from the outset. What is the best way to go about finding flexible legal work? What options are available? Will employers who are recruiting for full-time positions consider flexible alternatives?

Liana Gorman, director and co-founder of Australia's leading flexible recruitment website, Part Time On-Line will be speaking to the forum. An experienced recruitment professional, Liana will give an overview of this segment of the legal job market the kinds of flexible work arrangements legal service providers recruit for. She will also provide practical tips on:

- What legal service providers are looking for when recruiting employees to fill flexible positions
- How to prepare a resume for flexible work
- How to handle tricky interview questions

We will also discuss the growing market for secondment lawyers and consultants which has become very popular in the US and which offers an alternative flexible working model to part-time work.

Krista Gerrard, an experienced superannuation lawyer will speak about her experience of successfully creating a career path using non-standard working arrangements, in particular contracts which suit her professional and personal circumstances. Krista is currently on contract with Mercer.
